

THE SAGE / PRIME GENTLEMEN MONTHLY MOVIE

The tale of forbidden romance and changing social conventions follows three people and their emotional journey spanning decades.

Tom (Harry Styles) is a young police officer who conforms to everything expected of him in 1950s Britain – but he instinctively feels a desire for more. When earnest schoolteacher Marion (Emma Corrin) meets him on a summer beach, she’s immediately befuddled and they begin a sparkling relationship. It isn’t long, though, before the two encounter Patrick (David Dawson), a sophisticated museum curator. They become fast friends but, quietly in the background, Patrick invites Tom to explore his sexual identity, and a love triangle is formed that’s as tender as it is tenuous. Tom is torn between his passion for Patrick and the love he holds for Marion, and the youthful abandon of the trio gives way to more serious confrontations. As this unfolds, we cut to their older selves (Linus Roache, Gina McKee, and Rupert Everett), decades later, living under the weight of having changed each other irrevocably. As the puzzle pieces of their fallout are slowly revealed, we’re reminded of the existence of many intimate stories like these, lost to queer history.
